I determined to put a bold face on the matter, and entered the drawing-room, where a party of about fifty had assembled. It was evident by the titters of the young ladies, the grins of the men, and the subdued smiles of the dowagers that my story was known.

The Colonel had told it as a good joke to the Major, who had whispered it to his wife, she had breathed it into the ear of two of her friends, and in about en minutes every person in the room knew a young subaltern had unwillingly gone his rounds in his night-shirt.

As long as I stayed in that garrison I was a standing joke. When the girls saw me they always looked away and miled, and seemed as impossible for me to obtain a serious answer from any of them as for a clown to preach a sermon. They even seemed to be afraid to dance with me, fearing, as I afterwards heard, to look at my legs, lest I might be deficient in some article of raiment. I soon exchanged and went into another regiment; and years afterwards I heard my own adventure related in a crowded drawing-room, all the details of the story being true except the name of the prisoner—my misfortune having been attributed to an unfortunate fall. I never went to bed on guard after

THE EVENTS OF THE WEEK, Have been important in a commercia sense, and great changes have taken place in financial and business circles. Their idea is that they can replace their stock at less rates. and they feel willing to share their advantages with their customers, Long may they flourish.

THE FINANCIAL OUTLOOK Is improving—the Banks having gained largely in deposits, and the conservative of them have extended aid to merchants and business houses to the extent of their requirements. The kite flyers, of Wall street are of course subjected to rigid treatment by the banks and many lenders, and are therefore powerless to do any more harm. The constant current of gold to this country from England, in payment of our breadstuffs and provisions has caused an advance in the rate of interest, to 10 per cent., by the Bank of England. The flow of specie this way, shows that we have not been overtrading in gew-gaws; and that our panic was more the result of a collapse in the balloon enterprises of the country, than in legitimate trading. And so, while business will soon recover from the "scare." FRIEND HUMPHRIES :- It has been out two months since I left the fair village of Mexico to engage in traveling in a new business, and to-day I find myself in the city of Lowell, known as the city of spindles. It is situated 25 miles north by westfrom Boston in the pleasant valley of the Merrimac, at the confluence of the Merrimac and Concord rivers. Lowell was incorporated a town in 1826, with a population of about two thousand; in 1836, when the city was incorporated, it numbered 17,633 inhabitants. and to-day she can boast of 50,000. There are 15,000 more women than men. In 1821 this city was known as Pautucket Falls ; in 1826 it received the name of Lowell from one Francis Cabot Lowell, one of the chief projectors of the introduction of the Power looms in 1814, at Waltham. He was held in great esteem by his associates, prominent among whom was Mr. Nathan Appleton, through whose influence the name of Lowell was

The streets are very pleasant and handsomely laid out; the stores on the principal streets are very attractive, as well as the schools and church buildings. The chief manufactures are cotton and woolen goods. The greater part of the operatives dwell in the large factory boarding houses adjacent to the huge workshops. The majority of the employes are women, although the men form a handsome minority. The cotton and woolen manufactories represent a capital of nearly fourteen millions of dollars. A number of other industries are fostered in the pleasant valley of the Merrimac, noticeable among which is the manufacture of machinery, locomotives, cutlery, dye stuffs and chemicals, furniture, firearms, &c. Under the influence of the great corporations, aided in later years by healthy element of private industry, Lowell has become one of the most important manufacturing cities in the United States.

This large city is also the home of Dr. J. C. Ayers, the pill maker of America, who ships his pills and almanacs direct from his factory in quantities of six to ten ten tons per day, a branch railroad track being laid to his door. He employs 200 men and women, and has in operation 12 large printing presses, driven by a steam engine of thirty horse power. For the year 1874 he is printin ten hundred million almanacs in eleven different languages and dialects, to be sent to all parts of the civilized world. He is printing twenty-one hundred thousand papers for our county alone. Surely this is one of the wonders of the

This fair city is the home of our friend and patriot, General Butler, who was so heroic in our late war. The other day as I was passing by the general's place I could not help pausing to look upon the elegant mansion and home of the honored gentleman. It is a very pleasant place with its beautiful lawns so ely laid out, and its pleasant walks, and splendid flower gardens, and is upon an elevation of one hundred feet above the level of the road, and directly oposite Bunt's Falls, three hundred fee below the road, which gives from the general's mansiona view of the falls and the city of Lowell, as well as Lawrence general I was shown some of the war relies of the ald Pavalntian, alin grandfather, who fought under General made to gather them in and make them tinental army in the war of the Revoluquaintly can said by the old soldier, on wood with a jackknife, which was slung

General Butler was born in Deerfield, captain of dragoons during the war of 1812, a taithful soldier who served for a while under General Jackson at New Orleans, and there conceived such a love for that tough old hero as to name, his first boy Andrew Jackson. After the while lying at one of the West India Islands with his vessel, died of yellow er his two boys, Benjamin being then an infant five months old. A large part of his property he had with him at his death, and as little of it ever found its way to his widow, she was left to rear her boys as best she could with slender means of support. But it is in such circumstances that a New England mother shows the stuff she is made of. Capable, thrifty, diligent, devoted, Mrs. Butler made the most of her means and one of her boys a good education, and helped the other on his way to college, and to a liberal profession. In 1828, when Benjamin was ten years old, and Lowell was a thriving town of two thousand inhabitants, his mother re-Waterville College. His purse was most slenderly, furnished; his mother could afford him but little help, a good New Hampshire uncle gave him some assistance now and then, and he worked his three hours is the manual labor department, at chair making, earning wages ridiculously small. He was compelled to run in debt for a considerable part of his college expenses. He returned to Lowell in his twentieth year, and took hold of life with a vigorous grasp. The law office which he entered as a student was that of a gentleman who spent most of his time in Boston, and from whom he received not one word of guidance or instruction; nor did he feel the need of it. He read law with all his might, and began almost immediately to practice a little in the police courts of Lowell. At this time he joined the city guards, a the state. ### Magazine Notice.

We have received Dr. Smith's (British) Magazine for October. Among the good things is an incident related to show to the deaf and dumb. It appears that a deaf-mute lady had been decoyed from a railway carriage to some part of Lonwith her, he left her. She was found by the guardians of the city and taken to the workhouse. But all efforts to discover her residence or friends were futile for she was totally uneducated. Mr. Charles Rhind, connected in some capacity, with the British deaf, was called in, and though at first completely baffled, finally. by great perseverance in natural signs obtained a clue that put him on the right track, and eventually gave him the pleasure of restoring her to her father

The other articles are mostly on reli gious subjects and are very appropriate. The number contains a couple of excellent engravings, one of Jesus walking on the sea, and the other the miracle of the good poetry.

Kouponetisms.

Under the title of "Sounds from Secret "Howard Glyndon," a semi-mute, has published a collection of her own poems. Evening Mail says : "The title bears a double signification when it is remembered that the singer dwells in the land of silence, hearing not, speaking not, listening only to the unvoiced melodies of her own soul."

This is a very exquisite way of saying that the lady is deaf and dumb.

Of the merits of her book, the same paper says: "As a poetess she has a passionate soul, a loving heart, a soaring as the place of holding our sixth Bienthe paradox. These sounds from silent as well as om the New York Institution several ars ago. Since then he has devoted imself to crayon sketches, and has done markably well. We have heard from he was always busy. The papers always speak highly of his work. His last leter was from Dayton, Ohio, where he has cured a position on an illustrated paper and is sketching with diligence, and he told us that he was so much occupied ith his work that he could hardly find time to answer our letters. So we supyose he is making money rapidly.

Mr. Walbridge, of the Ontario Institution, paid a short visit to the New York Institution the other day. He seemed much impressed with his visit and doubtless went back to his Institution with many new ideas.

The article in a recent number entitled,"Don't Box Children's Ears," was an editorial, but it was not our editorial. It was taken from the New York Ledger, and by an oversight no credit was given.

A will made by a deaf and dumb lady, at an advanced age, and after she had become blind, was lately declared valid Such of the teachers of the New York

Institution as cared to register this year, had an easy time of it. When they got to the place where the board of registry met, they found a man on the board who was a former employe of the Institution. He remembered enough of signs and the with, so in answering questions the mutes didn't have much trouble.

We have heard a good deal of mute tramps, beggars and the black sheep flock generally. But the latest report staggers us considerably. In a city in Central New York, there one day appeared at the foot of the principal street, a deaf-mute well on in years, an aged sinner we should worthy of a better cause, entered store after store and stated that he was a poor dumb man in most reduced circumstances. that his wife was dead at home and he out trying to collect a little money for her burial. Of course he didn't appeal in vain, he got much sympathy and some cash besides. At the same time on the opposite side of the street a deaf-mute woman might be seen entering store after store telling the same story, with the slight variation that it was her husband who was dead and she was collecting money for his burial. This woman was the man's wife. At the end of the street they met, compared notes and took themfoul of any respectable mute, for if they had, their little game might have received a summary check.

Being a member. I present my views, presuming that all my colleagues will agree with me in them, and may be able to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion.

The subject of life insurance is of great importance and always demands much thought. Various modes of insuring life have been tried; since they have not been found satisfactory it becomes necessary to devise and test new ones, hence our hesitation to give you definite advice as to your adopting any of the best modes now in operation. But we selves off. They didn't seem to have run which we consider the best, that you may be able to adopt either, should you desire to do so.

The Episcopal clergymen have not long since devised an ingenious mode of insuring their lives for the benefit of their families at a surprisingly small exsional career in various cities in the Uni- pense.
